

Are your students looking to break away from the ordinary in the next stage of their education journey? Then training at the Army Foundation College (AFC) Harrogate as a junior soldier might be the perfect place to start.

Did you know?

Junior soldiers get paid around £950 a month after food and accommodation.

At AFC, junior soldiers aged 16 and 17 learn skills from map reading and weapon handling to leadership and using their initiative, whilst earning a salary. After graduating they will start their Army initial trade training, and usually an apprenticeship related to their role.

"The experience my son had there was fantastic. He didn't enjoy school but did well [at AFC] and really loved the fact that everything is very hands on. He had some great role models. Taught him some good basics and he continues his army career. I had initial reservations but couldn't recommend it enough."
